

The potential effects of phthalates on children and pregnant or nursing women have not been fully characterised but there may be concern for reproductive and developmental effects and precaution is advised with these patient groups.